A Multiplicity of Injustices

9:15 AM, Assembly Room, Karen Hernandez-Granzen, Carolyn Biondi, Adriana Abizadeh

According to a report published by the Anti-Poverty Network of New Jersey, structural racism and poverty create “a multiplicity of injustices” directly and indirectly affecting the education, housing, employment, legal protections, health and hunger of people of color living in poverty. Panelists from Nassau’s Trenton partners will provide concrete examples of the multiplicity of injustices endured by the people that they serve in Trenton and Princeton and how their programs, activism and advocacy work together to help eradicate these injustices.

Communities of Light

The Deacons invite you to join the annual Communities of Light Luminary Lighting with Womanspace on Monday, December 3 at 5:30 PM. The purpose is to increase local awareness of domestic violence, sexual abuse, and to show support for family, friends, neighbors, or co-workers who may be suffering in silence. As Mercer County congregations, neighborhoods, schools, and businesses are illuminated with the glow of luminaries, we give hope to victims suffering from domestic violence. Join us in the Narthex at 4:30 PM to prep 250 luminaries. More information is offered at www.womanspace.org.

Start Your Advent with an Evening of Jazz!

On December 1 at 5:00 PM, Nassau Church will be holding an evening Advent service led by renowned jazz musician, Ike Sturm and his ensemble of voice, saxophone, vibraphone and bass. Familiar carols and newly-composed and improvised pieces will be woven through prayer and scripture for a truly remarkable beginning to the Advent season. The Ike Sturm Ensemble is regularly featured at Saint Peter’s Church (the “Jazz Church”) in New York. A free-will offering benefiting Arm in Arm will be collected, and the service will be followed by a reception. Learn more about the Ike Sturm ensemble at www.ikesturm.com, and be sure to bring your family and friends!
